This beautiful little colonial bungalow home is just as practical and convenient as it is pleasing to look at.

The long colonial windows with flower boxes at their base, the neat trellis design between the two and the spacious corner porch are special features which make this place so popular.

From the porch you enter into either living room or dining room. By means of a well arranged hall all rooms have direct connection with bath. Spacious closets are provided connected with the bed rooms. A substantial saving is effected in plumbing, by locating bath and kitchen together.

The distinctiveness of this well-planned home will always call for favorable comment.

Home Needs of Covina Should Be Given Immediate Attention

Starting with this issue and continuing every other week, this space will be devoted to illustrations and suggestions covering every department of home building, interior decorating, modernizing the old home, and civic attractive features.

The homes to be illustrated during this campaign are all practical, modern homes, designated to meet climate and building conditions in this particular territory, and ideas will be featured that you will want to adopt as your future home.

Never before has there been so great a demand for homes in Covina as now, and if we all cooperate and give serious consideration to present needs, this educational campaign will be instrumental in starting a building boom never before equalled in Covina.

This educational campaign is being made possible by the progressive firms and individuals whose names appear at the bottom of this page. It is the earnest desire of those cooperating in this great enterprise that our citizens join with them in making this the greatest movement ever started in and for our city. It will be, for the Home is, or certainly should be, the one possession of which we are most proud. It is where we spend our most treasured hours of recreation, where we house our most beloved and where we entertain our friends. For these and many other reasons we are desirous of having our home as attractive and comfortable as our means will allow.

On these pages we are going to show you how you can have a home of modern design, a home both convenient and attractive, with features unique and distinctive, a home to be adored by friends and of which you can be justly proud, and we want you to take advantage of this service. Your inquiry for information, whether regarding homes illustrated or remodeling your old home, will be given the immediate attention of experts who have been retained by this paper.

Address all inquiries to Home Building Editor.

"The Marriage Price" in Gorgeous Setting at Star

ELSIE FERGUSON in "The Marriage Price"

The most gorgeous sets that have ever been used in a society motion picture play were used in Elsie Ferguson's new Arcraft picture, "The Marriage Price," which will be shown at the Star theater tonight and tomorrow. The drawing room is a replica of Frank Gould's room on that millionaire's Lakewood estate. The furniture was made especially for the set and the paintings, tapestries, rugs, and bric-a-brac is worth a small fortune. The bedroom set is done in orchid colored enamel with a narrow line of inset green wood. The wall lights are covered with shades of orchid silk and the bed set, dresser, and chairs and rugs contrast strikingly with the color scheme. Several interior decorators visited the Famous Player Lasky studios to look at the sets which they had heard were the most beautiful pieces of artistic work that have yet been shown in the studios. Copies of rooms in the Plaza and St. Regis hotels of New York are shown perfectly in this picture. Another remarkable set is the racing stable, copied from Frank Gould's stable at Lakewood. Real marble floors were laid in the studio, instead of the painted cloths which used to satisfy the public taste. The stalls were made of mahogany with marble columns. Carved walls and stained glass windows complete the elaborate set. Miss Ferguson plays the part of a society woman in "The Marriage Price," who becomes impoverished and seeks to make her own living with more or less success. There is a pretty love story and the situations are quite dramatic. Wyndham Standing is the leading man. The picture was adapted by Eva Unsell and the director was Emilio Chautard.

KOKOMO ESTABLISHES 6,000 MILE BASIS FOR ADJUSTMENT

Mr. A. V. Conradt, president of the Kokomo Rubber Company, today announced that on and after October 1st of this year, Kokomo tires will be guaranteed to be free from defects in material and manufacture and that adjustment will be made on a basis of 6,000 miles of service. "In 1895, when we were the only concern in American manufacturing pneumatic tires, it was our aim to make a product which would be so satisfactory that we should continue to lead the world in quality tires. We anticipated the formation of other automobile tire concerns and foresaw that tires would be made and sold at a wide range of prices. We also realized that tire users after experience with all grades of tire, would eventually purchase tires on the basis of miles of service per dollar and not on the 'something for nothing idea.' We were sure they would finally use only tires like Kokomos.

For a quarter-century Kokomo tires have been establishing a consciousness of their long wearing characteristics and high quality. Today Kokomo tires are bought and sold just because the name has come to mean assurance of service.

The name Kokomo on a tire means that it is guaranteed to be flawless and that it will wear out instead of 'giving out' at a given point like tires less perfectly made.

Only as a basis for adjustment do we set the arbitrary figure of 6,000 as the mileage within which adjustments will be made. The actual facts are that if a Kokomo tire runs 6,000 or three thousand or even a single thousand miles and is satisfactory it will in all probability give just as satisfactory service for 10,000 or 15,000 miles.

The six thousand mile guarantee simply means that even after Kokomo tires have out-lived the life of ordinary tires the Kokomo user is fully protected so that in the remote event of an imperfect piece of merchandise a satisfactory adjustment will be made on a 6,000 miles basis and thus the users investment in the Kokomo tire will always return him 10,000 or 15,000 miles of actual service.

All Kokomo dealers will offer this adjustment proposition to persons purchasing Kokomo tires on or after October 1, 1919.

NEW YORK EVANGELISTS HOLDING COVINA MEETINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Parsons of New York have arrived and have finished the first week of meetings in the University district of Los Angeles.

Tuesday was the opening day of their meetings in Covina, in the tent at the corner of Citrus and Orange streets.

At the afternoon meeting 95 boys and girls listened to a talk by Mr. Parsons. There will be more of these talks for boys and girls announced from day to day. Other people filled the tent in the evening to hear the evangelist.

Byron Burditt of San Dimas lead the singing. He was assisted by a large choir, with Mrs. McMahon of La Verne at the piano. The electric bells, played by Mrs. Parsons, are a novelty.

The meeting Friday evening will be of special interest to high school folk. Then Mr. Parsons will tell the story of his high school life.

Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock Mrs. Parsons will talk about "The Girl I Left Behind Me," which will be of interest to girls.

Sunday evening will close the series, and Monday the party will leave for Lancaster, in the Antelope valley.

COVINA NORMAL STUDENT HONORED BY CLASSMATES

Miss Ruth Whitwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Whitwell of Naville Place, who is a student of the Los Angeles state normal school, a member of the class that graduates in December, has been elected president of her class. This young woman is also president of the glee club.

High School Items

Monday afternoon we were entertained by Miss Frieda Peycke of Los Angeles, who gave a unique entertainment in that she gave a musical interpretation of poems by playing on the piano and reciting the poems at the same time. Among the poems that she interpreted were: "The Reward of the Cheerful Candle"; "When Tulips Bloom"; "The Baby Sister"; "The Chums"; "Out Where the West Begins"; "America For Me," and many others.

Last Friday our football team played the Occidental freshmen on their grounds. The college team, which is credited as being one of the best in Southern California, came out on the long end of a 54-0 defeat. The team's object in the game was not to win, but to simply find out its defects.

Monday afternoon the team played Monrovia at Covina. The efficient teamwork and fighting spirit of the team gave them a 25 to 7 victory over the Monrovia. Pitzer, the star quarterback of Covina, was credited with two touchdowns, and Nigg at half-back and Nigg at full-back were each credited with one touchdown. Had it not been for sending in most of the second team during the last half, probably the score would have looked worse to Monrovia than it did. As Monrovia is in our football league we are justly proud of seeing our team trim them in a practice game, as they will most likely do in the league game.

At a meeting of the high school faculty Tuesday afternoon, Miss Mildred Price was elected secretary.

FIRST WHITE WOMEN IN SAN DIMAS DIES

The death occurred last week of Mrs. E. W. Shuler, who bore the distinction of being the first white woman to settle in what is now San Dimas. She was sixty-six years of age at the time of her death and had lived in the state all her life with the exception of two years. Thirty-five years ago with her husband she moved from the northern portion of the state to the canyon ranch near San Dimas where she and her husband resided until a few months ago, when they sold their property and moved to the town of San Dimas with the intention of spending the remaining years of their lives free from the cares incident to the ownership of ranch holdings.

PROHIBITION—AFTER TAKING.

(By Ira Landreth)

Like Christianity, prohibition has never been tried; but like Christianity, prohibition has never been a failure. In a dozen or so of nations Christianity has been given a partial trial; and in the United States of America prohibition just now is being tried in spots. The enemies of Christianity, who are also the enemies of prohibition, have always succeeded in preventing its complete application to the affairs of government and law, hence wars and strikes, mobs and riots. The foes of prohibition who, almost to a man, are also the foes of Christianity, have taken care that there shall be no rigid enforcement of the laws against the liquor traffic; so we are confronted by the question, "Is prohibition at its worst better than license at its best?" It is.

So-called war prohibition has been more or less zealously applied since July 1. Opposed by the administration at Washington, under fire by the head of organized labor, discredited by one or more federal courts, and boldly assaulted by the expensive lawyers and limitless slush funds of brewers and distillers, it has still succeeded in reducing by half the crimes of the continent.

That is vindication enough for prohibition. If you doubt that, ask the families of those who, but for prohibition, would have been the other half of the doubled line of criminals. But health has improved and accidents reduced in hitherto wet cities. Alcohol wards in hospitals have been vacated. Pawn brokers report business declining, while savings bank deposits are growing. Hotel rooms and restaurants are crowded and tenants are seeking better houses. Workhouses are having to hire laborers. Ice famines are feared because ice cream has become abnormally popular. Prison wards and even chairs are drawing unearned salaries, and bankruptcy threatens those who had engaged to feed prisoners at so much per head.

For the first eighteen days of war prohibition in New York city—the enemy's country—according to the Tribune, never itself fanatically dry, arrests for drunkenness had fallen off 30 per cent, though confessedly many saloons were still selling, and thousands of citizens hoarding and drinking whisky, and nobody was interrupting the flow of 2.75 beer. "Root"—Elihu Root, beer, enough of which is guaranteed to create as riotous a debauch as any drink known to bibulosity. The first dry Saturday discovered to the amazed world the miracle of a sober Bowery. In Philadelphia the workhouse is advertising for farm laborers, and the alcoholic wards in the general hospitals, where in 1919 2,326 patients were treated, are now forever closed, their "business ruined by prohibition." Boston's "vice squad" no longer needed, as plain clothes men to round up the criminals to whom the saloons were ever so many cities of refuge, are now in uniform pacing peaceful beats.

But now comes that particular organization of financially well-furnished anarchy, the Association Opposed to National Prohibition, to pay the highest tribute yet paid to the value and effectiveness of prohibition. It declares that freight rates on railways must be increased 15 per cent to make up the losses caused by the fact that the 20,000,000 tons of alcoholic liquors and their raw material constituents are no longer transported at a cost of $100,000,000 annually. Think of it—400 pounds for every man, woman and child on the land! Verily prohibition prohibits, and verily, verily it was about time for it to prohibit if this single item of freight on stuff to debauch Americans had reached the appalling figure of $100,000,000 a year, and it, as those avowedly altruistic and truthful patriots, the A. O. N. P., solemnly asseverate, one freight car out of every 200 was formerly filled with wet goods, and if the transportation of alcoholic drinks was three times as great as poultry, game and fish; twice as great as all the farm implements or furniture hauled; and as great as either dressed meats, hay or cotton. Experience has taught us to consume a good deal of salt along with the statistics of the "wets," but if the foregoing, taken from a late installment of their systematic, if not shrewd, propaganda, be trusted, we were rapidly becoming too drunk a nation either to produce or to consume the bulkier and weightier foodstuffs that may now be counted on to fill empty stomachs and freight cars.

Like a lot of other propaganda of these wise ones opposed to water, this frenzied installment proves too much. It looks more like a plan for reducing the high cost of living by saving worse than wasted foodstuffs and by increasing the efficiency of producers, thus making them sober and industrious, instead of besotted and dependent. Prohibitionists will welcome this confirmation of their arguments by facts furnished by the distraught enemy.

It was this same aggregation of New York bankers and tobacco trust magnates and their silent side-partners, the German brewers, that lately charged to prohibition the increase of hotel rates, though most of the hotels were in dry territory long before July. We await an early emanation from this erudite news factory, charging to prohibition the recent alleged disarrangement of telegraph lines by the aurora borealis, the failure of adequate snowfall in the Rockies and the consequent dearth of irrigation in Wyoming and Montana. As a result of the state-wide prohibition, far-off Nevada is about to find her state prison empty, only ten prisoners having been received the first six months of this year as against sixty-four last year. Columbus, Ohio, finds her police force no longer needed for the old long-hour shift; and, with the city prison only half full, the police now need work but eighth ours. In twenty-seven days in July, 1919, only twenty-two persons were sent to the workhouse; the record for July, 1918, was 119. Arrivals do not keep pace with discharges, which arithmetically threaten this prison's depopulation. For five whole recent July days Ohio's capital had no arrests for drunkenness.

St. Louis, however, the more recently debauched home of the world's famous and once partially Berlined brewery, has an even more thrilling record—"No arrest for drunkenness during the first eighteen days of prohibition," which undisputed statement makes all of us feel like proverbial Missourians. Peoria, Illinois, which once disputed with St. Louis the distinction of supremacy as a source of the raw material for revelry, now boasts of but three arrests for drunkenness during the first three weeks of arid July, as against 130 for the same period a year ago.

Whatever their sordid and servile politicians may now claim to think about it, the cities of America sorely needed the salvation prohibition has brought to them; and every succeeding year of national sobriety will but deepen the world's amazement that we have hesitated so long to save America from the moral and political curse of her own liquor-enclaved cities, in whose rum shops anarchy bred like Guinea pigs, and treason and graft made the Kaiser look like a paragon of modest and self-obscuring patriotism and world-brotherhood.

All of which, being interpreted, means that national prohibition is the sublimest statesmanship of the past fifty generations, a fact which historians now living will yet record without creating controversy. The superman will be a sober son of future generations of sober Americans, unless the rest of the world accepts our invitation and follows our prohibition example, in which event, superman may be internationally the matter-of-course rule. Alcohol and protoplasm, the drink and the brain, booze and the baby, are foes.—Continued.

The Puente Walnut Growers Association packing house at Puente is now doing its peak-load of work in handling this year's walnut crop, which is by far the largest crop ever harvested in this district on account of the extraordinarily heavy set this season. Besides the scores of other workers, twenty-five sorters are required. Some difficulty has been experienced in getting cars to move the crop, and the house has had to be closed for the delivery of nuts on a few occasions.

WORLD'S GREATEST NEED.

Increased production is the paramount need of the world.

Inadequate production is the basic cause of the high cost of living.

Until world production is restored to normal, it is a question whether the standard of living can be as high as it was in the years before the war.

High prices are but a way of manifesting a world shortage of consumption goods.

We may eliminate all profiteering—and there is plenty of it—sell all the supplies the government now possesses at public auction, compel the emptying of all storage warehouses and we might temporarily reduce the level of prices but without increased production there would undoubtedly be higher prices a few months hence.

Produce, produce, produce must be the slogan of all patriotic citizens.

Production will make us a busy people. Busy people are happy people. Happy people are good citizens.

Strikes and labor agitation for abnormal short hours, higher wages and less work are the main causes for decreased production.

PUBLIC APPROVAL LACKING.

The fact that the whole cause of labor, as in everything else, is dependent for success upon public approval.

Lacking that endorsement it is bound to fail. The people are willing that labor should have a fair wage, and that legitimate efforts should be made by the workers to obtain it. But when increases are demanded merely because it appears that the power is at hand to enforce those demands, or when the public itself is made to bear the brunt of a strike, popular sympathy is forfeited and the aims of the men are lost.

The uniform failure of every strike thus far to attain the ends for which it was called, served only to intensify the deep-seated conviction that must be in the mind of every intelligent American, that it does not pay. When that fact is fully borne in upon the minds of labor, the radical element will return once more to the industrial sanity upon which our prosperity is built.

BIBLE STUDY QUESTIONS.

De Toqueville, the great Frenchman who wrote "Democracy in America," said that it was "the soul-equalizing and soul-elevating gospel of Christ" that had made America great and free. The early chapters of the Gospel of Luke, upon which the following questions are based, are steeped in democracy; poor people, peasants, humble women, shepherds—but dreaming of the world's redemption and being glorified by the presence of God.

Friday: Read 1:38-41. Why should Mary think of Elizabeth (36)? Trace the journey that Mary took on the map. Read in verses 42-45 the song of Elizabeth. Dwell particularly on the 45th verse. Is there a connection between the first clause and the second? Is not this a general law for our own living?

Saturday: Read today Mary's song of praise, 46-55. This is called the Magnificat. What other mother sang a similar song? I Sam. 2:1-10. Make a list of the Gospel Psalms that Luke alone records: 1:42-45, 46-55, 67-79, 2:14, 2:25-32.

Sunday: Read again Mary's song and divide it into three divisions according to its thought. Pick out a verse that seems to you the heart of the song.

Monday: How long did Mary stay with Elizabeth? (56). Read the account of the naming of John, 57-66. In connection with this read 13-20. Recall what the name John means. Why was it appropriate at that time?

Tuesday: Recall again what Gospel Psalms are given in Luke. Read the song of Zacharias, 67-79. Into what three natural divisions does it fall? 67-70, 70-75, 76-79. Give a title to each part. Read verse 80. Did John's early life influence his character and the methods of his preaching? Verses 74-75 reveal the great ambition of Zacharias' heart. What is it? Have you such an ambition?

Wednesday: Notice how carefully Luke gives the historical setting in 2:1-7. Is he fulfilling the promise made in verse 3? Who was the emperor of Rome? What do you know about him? Who was the governor of Syria? Where is Syria? What effect did the decree of Augustus have on the location of Jesus' birth? What prophecy was fulfilled? Micah 5:2.

Thursday: Read 2:8-20 and try to get a fresh impression of this familiar passage. Notice the striking contrasts: shepherds, angels, sore afraid, great joy, Christ the Lord, babe in manger. What suggestion of the character of Mary is found in verse 19? Is meditation of any value in the development of character?

RUNNING IN CAR TRACKS WILL SHORTEN LIFE OF TIRE

"The continual running in car tracks will shorten the life of any tire no matter how good it is. It should always be avoided when possible for when continued the rails soon wear away the tread rubber and causes a bending action of the fabric resulting in the breaking of the fabric," declares one of the service men connected with the service station operated by J. L. Barber, local distributor of Norwalk tires and tubes.

"Occasional driving in the car tracks to avoid very rough road," he continues, "may protect the car of sufficient vibration to warrant the act but care should at all times be taken to avoid the frogs at switches. Those frogs are generally pointed and have rough edges which act like a sharp knife and very frequently cut the tire, resulting in a bad blowout. Rails having a flush inside flange are far less apt to injure the tire than are the old style rails which allow the tire to slide over and down into the lower level. Driving a car along the tracks for a block may decrease the mileage in a tire many miles. The burr edge, found frequently on car tracks, also causes bad cuts in the tires and neglected cuts in turn cause tread separation."

NEW COURSES OFFERED STUDENTS IN NIGHT SCHOOL

Two new courses will be offered in the night school at the high school—commercial law and first aid.

The commercial law consists of the following subjects: practical business law, contracts, notes, money, agencies, insurance, and a specific study of the laws of California.

The first aid course will consist of a study of sterilization of wounds, their care, bandaging, care of fractures and resuscitation. This course will be offered by Donald McIntosh, who has had eighteen months experience in driving an ambulance at the battle front in France. This is a rare opportunity for the public to receive some fine practical instruction in first aid. McIntosh has had fine army training in preparing him for the ambulance work, besides a great deal of experience in hospitals.

These classes will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings, beginning at seven o'clock. Anyone interested will be cared for if he will come to the high school and ask for these classes.

FLOOD CONTROL SPEAKER AT COVINA HIGH SCHOOL

Mr. F. Cattle of Riverside will speak before the students of the Covina union high school next Monday afternoon at 2:45 in the high school auditorium. His subject will be "Flood Control." The public is invited to hear him also. Mr. Cattle, who spoke before the associated chambers of commerce of the San Gabriel valley two weeks ago, is one of the best informed advocates of water conservation in the United States.

A WAR TRIBUTE FOR COVINA VALLEY

(Note.—The erection of a memorial to the soldiers and sailors of the Covina valley is at the present time receiving the consideration of our citizens, and the Argus publishes the suggestions of Miss Dorothy Ames, a student in the Covina high school. The article was written as a part of the students' work, with no thought of its being published.)

When the call to the colors came in 1917 Covina responded nobly and sent both her young men and young women to the field of action. Now that they have returned—and most of them have returned for there are very few men buried in distant Flanders field, the question of a tribute claims our attention.

A monument is a common tribute and is always appropriate, but there is no fitting place for a monument in Covina. A memorial building seems to be a more fitting tribute for this community as we have no city hall or adequate auditorium. Until recently the auditorium of our high school or Woman's club building has accommodated Covina audiences, but there are more people in the city now than ever before and the population will probably continue to increase. The city offices have for some time been crowded into a small store building and the time has come for something to be done.

Other cities, no larger and no more prosperous than Covina, are planning and building community houses as tributes. It would seem to be more practical for Covina to spend money for this than for a monument, as has been suggested.

To carry out the idea of a memorial such a building should be low, not more than two stories, with large arched windows and marble finishings. A memorial court should occupy the center of the building. This court should contain an exhibit of war relics and souvenirs and should be paneled with bronze tablets containing the names of the honor roll. Besides the city offices this floor should also contain a kitchen and banquet hall. The second floor should be devoted to a large auditorium with adequate stage and dressing rooms.

The basement, approached by side entrances, should be used to supply the great need of clean public amusement. Men and boys who have nothing to do in the evenings could use the reading rooms, gymnasium, shooting gallery, swimming pool, or bowling alley, instead of loafing on the street corners. There is such a place in Pittsburg, which is open to the newsboys in the evening. The boys take advantage of this and keep the rooms full. The police of that city recognize the good that is being done and are back of the work.

Covina needs an open house of clean entertainment even more than she needs office buildings or an auditorium. This would be what the Y huts were to the service men—a real force for good.

A central site should be selected and plans should be formulated at once, for surely no better use could be made of the money necessary, and nothing would show our gratitude to the service men more than this, and when the task is completed the whole community should back it. Covina has always been progressive, and why not be one of the first to express our gratitude in such a material way?

MOVIE EXPERT DRIVES MAX- WELL OVER LOGGING ROAD

When L. J. Burud, moving picture expert, started from Los Angeles recently, he declared that he was going to film the west in its wildest regions and as this great country should be shown to eastern people.

The first leg of the journey was from Los Angeles to San Francisco, then San Francisco north to Seattle. Burud is travelling with a Maxwell touring car equipped with Goodrich Silverstone cord tires. Writing from Oregon he has the following to say:

"It is impossible to express my admiration for the wonderful work the Maxwell has accomplished on this section of my trip. When I say that we have used the car to photograph the biggest forest fire that the State of California has suffered in years, you can readily imagine the hardships we have put the car to. In order to get to the scene of action it was necessary to drive through burning forests on a logging road, the last five miles of which no motor car had ever sailed. You can imagine the surprise of the rangers when we reached the camp of the fire fighters at the summit of the ridge."

COUNTRY CLUB HOUSE SOLD FOR RESIDENCE

The Covina Country club-house at the corner of Second street and the San Bernardino road has been sold this week to Glenn Harnish, who will remodel the property for a residence.

This club-house building was erected nearly twenty years ago, and for a number of years the club was one of the most prosperous and progressive organizations in the valley. It was here that all public men when they came to the valley were entertained and on the guest book are the names of Governor Gillett, Governor Stephens, Senator Johnson, Congressman Osborne, and many others.

At the commencement of the great war interest in club life in this valley waned and a little over a year ago it was decided to close the club-house. As soon as the business affairs of the organization have been liquidated the club will pass out of existence.

PROBABLE LIFE OF THE LEMON TREE

Robert W. Hodgson, director of the county farm bureau, in a recent issue of the Times, writes on the probable length of productiveness of the lemon tree. In his article he makes the following statements:

"We have not grown lemon trees long enough in California to have any definite information regarding the length of their period of productivity. There are plenty of lemon orchards from fifteen to twenty years old which are on the decline, and there are also a goodly number of orchards nearly twice that age which are still bearing good profitable crops. In fact, I doubt whether we shall ever be able to arrive at a definite figure for the productive period of lemon trees. The environmental conditions have so much to do with this period that I am certain we are bound to find it differs in various localities."

"Experience in foreign countries in the raising of lemons has shown that under favorable conditions the trees will live and bear profitable crops for a great many years, reports existing of good orchards seventy-five and eighty years of age. Planted on good fertile soil, the fertility of which is maintained by judicious practices, with productive strains of trees given intelligent care and irrigation, I have no doubt that we may expect some of our lemon orchards to last that long. There is no doubt, however, that a good many lemon orchards at the present time are located in such shallow soils and have been given such poor care that they need not be expected to last more than fifteen or twenty years."

"It used to be thought that fifteen years was the maximum productivity of the peach orchards in this state and many orchardists arbitrarily pulled out the trees when they had been in bearing that long, and replanted. We are now finding that the reason the trees went back at that age is largely lack of fertilization as well as infection with various wood rot organisms and that, given good care, it is possible to practically double the bearing period of our peach orchards."

THE AMERICAN'S CREED.

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people, whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; support its constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

PURPOSES AND BENEFITS OF CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

(By Carlisle Thorpe.)

There are two equally important factors in every horticultural enterprise—producing and marketing. The average horticulturist devotes over 98 per cent of his time to producing his crops, and less than 2 per cent to the marketing of them. Yet the selling end is fully as important as the producing end. Of what avail is an abundant yield of fine quality without a ready and profitable market? It costs the average fruit grower at least ten times as much to produce his crop as is charged by co-operative organizations to intelligently market it.

Most of the larger California growers' co-operative associations were organized for the purpose of reducing marketing costs in the distribution of the products they handle, and for obtaining reasonable price for the producer without materially advancing the price to the consumer. All of these organizations, in their early stages, to a varying degree, accomplished these results, and thus reduced the number of hands their product passed through in its journey from producer to consumer.

But the modern and highly efficient Producers' Co-operative Association has developed a much broader field. Of course, the economical marketing of the merchandise handled is still an important feature of the organization, but the larger growers' associations are now serving the grower, the trade and the consumer in so many other ways that the mere accomplishment of economically marketing the growers' crops is but a portion of its functions.

The California fruit grower of today generally, is, or at least should be, a specialist. He properly concentrates his full business efforts on producing larger and better crops. The field of knowledge in his profession is so varied and intricate, and is being added to so constantly, that it takes practically all of his time to keep abreast of the latest developments in the most approved methods of producing the crops he is specializing on. The California grower who gives a great deal of study to the most improved methods for producing his crops is the successful grower.

Every successful grower must necessarily give a great deal of his time in assimilating and putting into practice these modern producing methods. Consequently he has little time to devote in becoming a marketing expert, little time to give to legislative matters affecting his industry, such as tariff questions, freight rates, etc., and it is utterly impossible for the individual grower to obtain unbiased market information and impossible for him to definitely know of foreign competitive conditions, where the crops he is growing are also produced abroad and imported to America in competition with the domestic product. Consequently it is impossible for him to individually market his crop to best advantage. The comparatively few growers remaining independent of their organizations usually turn the association's marketing information to their benefit. That is, they get under the association's umbrella by selling their crops on a basis of the association prices and not on their own judgment.

Every large growers' co-operative association should be, and generally is, in a position to gain and disseminate all such information to its members. It should, and generally does, exert its every effort in securing fair and equitable freight rates and reasonable tariff protection for its members, and these growers' organization are in a position to gain the best possible market information both domestic and foreign.
